The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects earnestly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, all dressed in rags. He doesn’t want to be whipped, and he boasts about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly announces that Tom will be skipped school that afternoon and won’t be served dinner. Tom is about to dig in his heels and show her that his coffin is still seven feet in the ground, but Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has sworn the boy on his hand to go to school.

Tom goes out of the house for a walk. He runs into Huckleberry Finn and his friend, Joe Harper, who arrives at the house. Tom and the two boys visit the old man, who is bedridden and arrogant. Tom and Huckleberry Finn allegedly痢期 the house and eventually chase the owner out of the house.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Joe passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “shoe alley,” a kind of mortgage. Joe almost agree, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his chores.

Tom comes home at suppertime, looking and acting thoroughly bony, with his hair untidy, and his clothes hung about his shoulders. During supper, Aunt Polly asks Tom what he has been doing. Tom says he has been skipped school that afternoon and went over to the country and fished. His clothes are still covered with mud. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and the new arrival circle the house, Tom declaring that the new man is a "wiseacre" and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.
