The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischievousness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and when he hears Aunt Polly’s scolding he rubs his eyes up and down, frowns, and says, “Oh, I didn’t know about it, I didn’t.” He will be skipped school that afternoon and sent back to this afternoon and sent back to the room to learn it all over again. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom goes out of the house to get some air, and at the western end he finds his old schoolmates, Huckleberry Finn and Joe Harper. They have just been whitewashing, and Tom has heard their story. When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of double. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tallow.

She then went to the theater and saw her that her collar is still split from a switch. But still, Tom’s half brother, Huck, tells him to disguise his mark. Tom has sworn never to tell anybody.

Tom goes out of the house and into the streets of St. Petersburg. While wandering, he meets the new arrival, a boy named Mark. Tom and the new arrival chases the newcomer all the way home.
